Having previously worked on the client side in the healthcare industry, Sarah Concannon has experience with more than a few consulting organizations. That's why when she began to learn more about RPI Consultants, she saw something different and exciting. "Coming from the client side," Sarah says, "I find it so rewarding that RPI empowers me to provide the sort of help and support I wish I had received." Sarah's attitude is less "can-do" and more "wants-to-do," which makes her a great fit for the team. "I'm a big fan of constant variety and challenges," she says. "It's all about working together and matching each other's strengths!"

Wearing Multiple Hats

Sarah is in the unique position of being both a Supply Chain Management Consultant and a Project Manager, sometimes performing both roles on the same project! She acknowledges that wearing these two hats can be challenging at times, but Sarah keeps focus by providing clear and consistent communication, and always keeps the client's goals in mind. "We're here to help clients use existing tools more effectively or to get running on new tools," she says, "but always in an effort to make their lives easier and better."

In addition to her two official roles, Sarah is also very active internally. You can regularly find her writing or editing documentation, creating new deliverables, or teaming up with other consultants to work on webinars or presentations for the Great Lakes User Group.

Background & Experiences

Sarah received a Bachelor's of Fine Arts from the University of Massachusetts Dartmouth and has tremendous experience in supply chain and purchasing with healthcare organizations.

Downtime Pursuits

Sarah is a self-described life-long learner and can usually be found consuming information in a variety of formats, including podcasts, books, and articles. She also credits her young daughter for helping her see life through a completely new perspective and a renewed sense of wonder!
